

ABSTRACT

The invention described is a system and method for efficient scheduling of periodic phenomena including a collection of methods for modeling and selecting periodic task rates, resource schedule periods, and units of measure for the task and resource periods in scheduling systems such that the systems' schedulers may be improved with respect to performance metrics such as collision avoidance, computational efficiency, and resource utilization.